Headline:
Largely cloudy but dry on Sunday, brighter on Monday.

Today:
A cold start for many, with a widespread frost clearing through the morning. Otherwise fine and dry with light winds, but often cloudy with limited sunny spells. Maximum temperature 9 deg C (48 deg F).

Tonight:
Becoming cloudier during the evening and overnight, with patchy light rain possible in the far north later. Remaining largely dry elsewhere. Not as cold as previous night. Minimum temperature 3 deg C (37 deg F).

Monday:
Generally cloudy with the odd spot of rain likely during the morning, but brighter in the afternoon, with perhaps some brief sunny spells in the far south. Slightly milder. Maximum temperature 10 deg C (50 deg F).

Outlook for Tuesday to Thursday:
Brightening up after a mostly cloudy start on Tuesday. Some patchy drizzle over the western hills. Mild but wet and windy Wednesday and Thursday, with gales possible for a time.
